

E-Z DRILL

*JULY 2016
NEWSLETTER*

ANY PROJECT
ANY SPEC
ANY DEADLINE
ANY TIME

SUCCESSFUL BAUMA SHOW

As most of you know, the Bauma Show was last April in Munich, Germany, and is the largest construction equipment show in the world. And it did not disappoint: 580,000 visitors from 200 countries; 3,423 exhibitors from 58 countries; seven big days of exhibiting.

BECOME AWARE OF OSHA'S NEW SILICA EXPOSURE REGULATIONS

You should all become familiar with the new silica exposure regulations from OSHA. Employers covered by the construction standard have until June 23, 2017 to comply with most requirements. These new regulations will apply to all forms of cutting, sawing, drilling and crushing of concrete, brick, ceramic tiles, rock and stone products.

E-Z Drill offers dust collection kits to fit most all standard E-Z Drill units. Information on the dust collection kits can be found on our website: ezdrill.com

July 2016 (page 2)

E-Z DRILL SALES SCHOOL

We will be announcing the dates for our E-Z DRILL EXPERIENCE SALES SCHOOL soon. The dates will be late in October.

JOB STORIES

We are all probably more interested in reading a job story than just reading advertisements, either in a magazine, or reading on a website. We are fortunate in that many job stories in the past have mentioned the use of an E-Z Drill. We are always looking for more opportunities, so if you have a particularly interesting project going on in your area and/or with one of your customers that involves the use of an E-Z Drill, be sure to let us know, and we'll start the process. These job stories are good for you and us!

"USED" DRILLS AVAILABLE

Model 210B-2 SRA s/n: AD-5141

Remember to keep checking the "USED DRILLS" section on our website, as this can change daily / weekly.

RIO OLYMPICS – A CONSTRUCTION "TRAIN WRECK"?

We are fast approaching the start of the Summer Olympics in Rio De Janeiro – the opening ceremony is August 5. Besides the concerns of the Zika virus, water pollution, safety, there are real concerns about the completion of the all the construction venues. The following is from an article in the New York Times by Vanessa Barbara dated just a few days ago, July 1:

I went to Rio recently to see how preparations for the Games are going. Spoiler: not well. The city is a huge construction site. Bricks and pipes are piled everywhere; a few workers lazily push wheelbarrows as if the Games were scheduled for 2017. Nobody knows what the construction sites will become, not even the people working on them: "It's for the Olympics" was the unanimous reply, followed by speculation about "tents for the judging panels of volleyball or soccer, I guess."...I asked the Rio 2016 press office for a tour, but it olympically ignored me. Almost all venues are still under construction. I managed to see part of the Barra Olympic Park, which will host many of the events, after buying a last-minute ticket to a Volleyball World League match. Although construction for the Games is progressing, it appears far from "97 percent complete," as the organizers claimed recently...I also saw most of the Deodoro Olympic Park, which is apparently open to anyone who wants to see it. I walked straight in and found half-built grandstands abandoned in the middle of a Friday afternoon.

Money, politics, and the Olympics: stir that up together, and you get a smelly, inedible mess. And you can probably find the World Cup on the same menu...

Questions or comments? Email us at sales@ezdrill.com, or call 1-800-272-0121 (International: 1+405-372-0121)